

Summary of the book “Climate Change, Untold Truths and the Ultimate Solution”.

Answers: How climate change evolved and why it worsen in spite of the efforts to control. How and why have people created the evils which took away their freedom, happiness, peace and hope?

The most rational and probably the only solution that ends all the above.

Missed Opportunities and the Agenda for the Days to Come

Humanity wants peace, happiness and a hopeful living. Otherwise life becomes an ordeal or hell. Unfortunately people themselves ruined the wonderful living nature gifted to them through their own imprudent acts and the failure to learn from their mistakes.

World had been a different one for humanity since the end of Second World War. For various reasons and because of the international organisations the world came together, countries understood each other and almost every group enjoyed their safe homeland and freedom. But most of the people, especially those in the present day developing and poor countries failed to understand their limitations, responsibilities and duties and so have been losing their freedom to the evils they have created for them and now many enlightened youths are quitting their countries and proceed invariably to the land of white men who were chased by their own fathers to gain freedom. These must have awakened the responsible people and the migrants to understand their faulty ideologies and policies; but the governments are continuing with the same and the migrants irreversibly harm many host countries with their culture and ideologies which failed their countries.

The host countries, especially the western countries had wonderful opportunities to control most of the evolving evils around the world and to unite the whole humanity as a global village; but failed and are ruining the freedom their children are entitled to. If humanity continue to do these mistakes the future may turn unbearably horrible for all.

The reader will understand that all such ignorance and indifference of responsible people gave long life to man-made evils and helped newer evils to evolve which then culminated into global warming (GW) and climate change (CC).

The Unexpected Happenings

At the end of the wars the infrastructures and youth populations of Europe and Japan were decimated and they were in huge debts. Most of the developing and poor countries of today were in a far better position with man power, surplus natural resources, basic infrastructures and many more, including freedom to make their lives great. The ruined western countries rebuilt their economy to the envy of the whole world. The others also sincerely did everything to remove poverty and other evils; but failed because they failed to understand the basic cause behind their sufferings. The resultant irrational policies ruined the peace, happiness and freedom they enjoyed and made their life more horrible with corruption, crime, violence, terrorism and many more and at last CC.

Understanding the factors behind these unexpected happenings will help us to correct the ruinous mistakes.

Diverse Problems and Unthinkable Advantages

The developed countries have created a highly unsustainable economy for them, which is propped up with two inevitable crutches – the highly polluting fossil fuel and external market. These take away their freedom and they now suffer economic chaos, unemployment and even poverty in many regions and are waging an unsuccessful war against pollution. They got entrapped to such an extent that they themselves cannot do much to regain real economic freedom. My studies very clearly say that the poor and developing countries can regain wholesome freedom faster than the developed countries if they have the will and then they can ease the difficulties of polluting countries. So there is no point in envying the western world and aping their inherently unstable economy. Now the world must do all which will yield fruits – by understanding the past mistakes.

To understand the “natural history” of the debilitating evils evolved in poor and developing countries we must go back to 1950s and trace the happenings and demographic changes through these decades. These give valuable information and the most rational solution to end all evils, including the uncertainties of industrialised western countries.

Orderly Evolution of Evils

Their major curse of those days was poverty but now they suffer uncountable curses and evils which never appeared all of a sudden; but evolved in some sequential pattern. This orderly evolution of evils help us to connect the relationship between them and the growing deficits created by growing population.

The First Major Fault of People in Poor and Developing Countries

As we just saw, about sixty years ago almost every village of poor and developing countries had a surplus of life supportive resources like fertile lands and water. Their major needs were food, clothing and shelter. Because of surplus resources all of them were employed. Their farm products fetched good income and so they were able to buy the services and products of their smaller urban population which ensured wholesome sustainability. Because of such satisfactorily employment, education was optional and because of the comfortable income they never needed most of the modern gadgets and huge energy. Since everyone worked to convert resources into wealth huge families were considered assets. Yet exploitations, mal-governance, pestilences, vagaries of nature, ignorance, etc. often drove people to poverty.

Families multiplied and population grew without the right understanding of the supporting capacity of their natural resources. At some point they depleted the surpluses. That means the population of those villages have crossed the supporting limits of their villages or regions. It also means that they have crossed the sustainable or optimum population density (OPD) to become unsustainable or high population density (HPD).

The Commonly Observed Sequence of Evolving Evils

Birth and growth of poverty: Deficits of life-supportive resources mean poverty. When families with many children divided their resources their share shrunk faster and easily dragged them into poverty. At this stage fertile land and water for sustainable farming remain as deficiencies. (However humanity manage this deficit through unsustainable artificial farming technologies.) With further growth of population the deficits also grew and threw more and more people into deeper poverty.

From now on reader must watch how newer needs become inevitable to sustain life. Nature cannot provide most of these additional needs and so people exploit others, destroy nature to extract something or bring in the polluting fuel harmful to nature. With growing population such acts worsen to create newer evil. From wholesome sustainability point of view all these remain as growing deficits to be compensated.

Unemployment: Since the share of many newly formed families shrunk to unsustainable levels under-employment and unemployment evolved. The huge families which were considered to be assets are the first to suffer poverty and unemployment.

Now education and acquiring special skills become additional needs to compete for employment elsewhere.

Birth of Invisible Evils: Government tried to reduce poverty and unemployment with freebies and other programmes. Freebies minimised the burden of breadwinners to some extent. Yet it hurt the dignity of sensitive children because every child wants to be fed with the income of its own parents and protected and cared for by them. When children of planned small families of the neighbourhood and relatives enjoy all those; the children of poor families suffer humiliations like eating something not earned by their parents, standing in humiliating long queues for their requirements, petitioning authorities for help, enduring low quality life, vanishing social respect and many more. Thus indignity, disparities and inequalities have arrived in villages which enjoyed equality and peace. These are terrible curses which ruin the body, mind and soul of the victims; yet the creators of inequality are not the society or enemies but their own dear parents who had been too imprudent to realise their limits and prevailing situations like unemployment and growing needs and to plan accordingly.

Governments can satisfy only the physical needs but can never play the role of worthy parents. Government must have guided families to plan sensibly to avoid deficits; but failed in the name of human rights and other virtues which took away the means and rights of poor families to enjoy life. These hurt growing youths and cause permanent deep wounds in their minds which force them to accept even immoral antisocial acts which try to “heal” their psychological wounds and take them towards “equality”.

Unhealthy Competition: Because of the above errors populations exploded, free resources vanished, newer necessities burdened families and forced them to compete and grab anything that support life – like resources and evolving employment opportunities.

Crime, Corruption and Forest Destruction: Despite hard work many families failed to satisfy their dependents. When dependents starved the breadwinners tried to earn something through antisocial means. For many people in need these new evil activities have become their breadwinning profession. These impose deficits upon law-abiding families through losses they incur by theft and other crime. And add new necessities like strengthening security with special gadgets and additional policing.

Violence: Opting for violence is not at all an easy decision. As we saw there are youths who suffered humiliations, indignities and social marginalisation (exclusion) through disparities and inequalities. And others who lost their rightful opportunities to crime and corruption. All these harden their minds to go even for violence and such acts. Violent deeds cause more destruction than the requirements of the perpetrators and make the society more unsustainable with more deficits.

Migrations: When life is tough or impossible because of the above curses people try to escape from the villages which sustained their families for generations. Their most preferred destinations are the urban centres.

Travel, Transport and Pollution: Migrations favour travel and transport industry which further need a variety of industries to manufacture vehicles and huge energy source to run them. Nature cannot provide that and so people dig out the highly polluting fossil fuels which were kept at depths by nature in order to make life possible on earth.

Urbanisation: The moment people depleted natural resources and relied upon other sources (like unnatural farming, petroleum, engaging in crime to feed families, requiring policing to keep them on order, etc.) they lost their opportunity to balance or repay the debts to nature. Urban life goes entirely against green economy and they entirely depend upon the transport industry for their raw materials, water and food and polluting petroleum for their transport and energy requirements. Their needs are too many and their jobs do not help in any way to compensate their debts to nature. They pollute enormously but cannot neutralise even a fraction. Thus all these remain as huge debts to nature or sustainable living.

More Pollution: As we just saw urban life is purely a polluting life. And they also directly warm the atmosphere in too many ways. So the growth of urban centres and unbalanced industrial economy massively create the factors which help global warming.

Fading Hopes: Cities create varieties of jobs ranging from administrative officers to the low paid factory worker. Yet those new opportunities also have limits. When more and more migrants carrying huge deficits arrive, opportunities get saturated and create unemployment.

Worsening Evils: The above lead to unhealthy competitions in cities and repeat the evolution of more crime, more violence and other evils described above.

Divisive Tendencies and Hatred: When evils multiply and ruin the peace, happiness and hope, people lose their trust and hope they had with their leaders in politics, religion, and other organisations. Since the leaders failed and are too ignorant to understand their faults they try to blame other communities, minorities, other parties and even other countries for their sufferings. Because of such morons among leaders, divisive tendencies, hatred, enmities, treacherous acts, mutual blaming and other such evils arise to take away every virtue people cherish. Since people are clueless about their sufferings they obey the malicious leaders who come out with misleading lies, false promises, faulty “diagnosis” of the socioeconomic curses, malicious ideologies, evil stories, twisted historical events and above all by quoting out-of-context verses from scriptures and other religious books. Such brainwashed youths get ready even for brutalities and destructions. These further worsen peace and create more deficits.

When the opportunities to find scapegoats or to divide people do not exist, people get fed up with governments and rise against rulers as we see in many countries (Egypt, Greece, Syria and many others). If those deposed or threatened leaders who led them for decades had enlightened their people about the importance of forming sustainable small happy families such deterioration could never have occurred and people would have praised them with gratitude.

Terrorism (Fight) or International Migration (Flight) from Danger Zones: When people are pushed to the corner with all the above destructive and demoralising evils the options left are to fight against with whatever left or to fly away from the dangerous situation. Terrorism is a highly risky venture; yet the above evils and motivation drive many to terrorism. So terrorism never evolve at earlier stages of the evolution of evils but wait until the above evils, desperation and malicious and immoral leaders appear in society.

Those who cannot face the deteriorating living conditions fly away from their own motherland to any region which promise a better life. For such escape they risk dangerous journeys and punishments in other countries. Their most common destinations are western developed countries who respect human rights and practice equality.

The Dangerous Migrants: No one likes to leave motherland. But the migrants quit because their own people have made their countries dangerous to live in. Ideologies act as software and decide the acts of people. In today's world misinterpreted religious ideologies, superstitions, pauperising traditions, evil practices, malicious preaching, etc. play a crucial role in ruining the peace and hope of many countries. The desperate migrants must think of the contrasting situations in their own countries and the host countries and try to correct their mistakes and adopt the progressive ideologies and practices of peaceful countries. But unfortunately most of the migrants believe that the opportunities they enjoy in an alien country is a blessing of their own god and continue with the ruinous ideologies which ruined their countries and drove them as destitute. Such ignorance not only hinders their integration and progress but also ruin the countries which accepted them with respect and trust.

Treating Migrants: Human rights, equality, integration, creating multicultural societies, etc. are highly praiseworthy norms. But when the beneficiaries are too ignorant to understand those virtues it cause discord and take away the peace of both the guests and hosts. Because of such fooleries the western countries are ruining their own peace and hope but also create millions of enemies for their children.

The culture of a people is the culmination of their traditions, beliefs, religion, literatures, history and above all the seasons and climate. Trying to practice it in another country or to integrate with others is unnatural, as many host countries try to do. When migrants with pauperising beliefs, contrasting ideologies and dangerous cultural practices are made citizens of western countries they invariably remain as poor. So they suspect the hosts and even hate them for the "disparities and inequalities" and try to oppose even noble act like integration. Such ignorance and ingratitude are ruinous to them and even to global peace. When a migrant in western country feel discriminated their families in their countries, their race, their religious people and even their countrymen hate the western countries as is happening now.

On the other hand if the host countries point out the faults of migrants and help them to adopt progressive ideologies the migrants can enjoy progress; but such acts are condemned for many reasons and attract flake. The hosts too do not know why their own people live an admirable life which attracted the migrants and what kind of ideologies ruined the countries of migrants.

So the best way is to treat the migrants with respect and regularise their jobs and pay and help them to go back to their dear roots with the fortunes they have made in western countries. A job done in western countries help the migrants to earn five to twenty times more than what they earn in their own countries and so working for about ten years will ensure a dignified life for the migrants in their own countries but can only give a below average life in western counties. Such returned respectable citizens praise the attitudes of western countries and they as well as their relatives and friends remain as grateful friends of west for ever (unlike the opposite situation with granting of citizenship). Such proliferating friends around the world in millions help to end poverty in poor and developing countries and also help diverse people and countries to come closer as friends.

The Solution: Now we know that the original event which initiated the serial evolution of evils is the creation of deficits in remote families around the world. It was the accumulation of deficits which favoured the creation of more horrible evils. Evolved evils further created additional kinds of deficits; but we cannot do much to control the latter additions of deficits and evils. So the only promising, practicable and measurable solution is to stop deficit-creation at family level by guiding and helping every family to form a dignified sustainable family.

The Reversal of Evolution: When families enjoy contentment and dignity evils like crime, forest destruction and migration gradually stop. With time villages will gain free resources which can be used to strengthen rural economy by promoting renewable energy such as bio-diesel, alcohol, wind generators, solar energy and many others and they can revert to natural farming.

When migration from villages comes down polluting travel and transport industries weaken and urban centres stop growing. When the numbers of job seekers plummet employers offer higher pay and better facilities for employees which gradually bring down disparities and inequalities. Prudent managing of this stage is vital for the permanent freedom of each country and to ensure wholesome sustainability of every village and country. Western countries mismanaged this stage. Now China and few other countries and regions experience this phase and if they prudently plan and work to reduce inequality and disparities their people will enjoy a happy and hopeful life much before the developed countries. When more and more countries use prudence to earn real freedom with sustainable living, it also will bring diverse countries and races together as global village.

Global Village: The friendly coming together as global village is probably the most desirable event one can imagine. It fosters permanent peace, happiness and freedom and minimises pollution. With the peace and surpluses we can heal the wounds of nature by bringing down accumulated pollution, reforestation and restoring green environment. We can do only this much to arrest GW which must naturally scale down the horrors of CC.

Seriousness of the Situation: Sustainability or unsustainability are vague terms and trying to make policies based on them cannot do much to end human miseries – as is happening. But when we express the same by explaining its components people and planners will understand more. Mankind has recklessly created so much of deficits that cannot be compensated even if one more planet earth is created. It may appear an exaggeration; but if we list the various existing shortages/needs like water, land for natural farming, non-polluting or renewable energy source, infrastructures, education facilities, medical facilities, facilities to reduce the accumulated pollution, funds to restore lost forests and environment, etc. and quantify them, we will understand the enormity.

Understanding the immediate dangers of such huge deficits and their impact must motivate normal people (especially those who suffer) and patriotic governments to do all to see every future family as a sustainable one.
